Pygmy Camels.
The western part of Peru is inhabited by a species of camels which are the pygmies of their kind. They are snow white and are on that account almost worshipped by the people.

The Simplon Pass.
The road constructed by Napoleon over the Simplon pass has 264 bridges and rises to a height of 8,600 feet.

The Kingbird.
The kingbird owes his name to the fact that he is the one small bird who ventures to attack the marauding crow and that he always comes off victorious. Rising above his foe, he drops upon his back, attacking him with beak and claws until the unlucky intruder makes off in ludicrous consternation.

Iron and Oxygen.
Pure iron in the presence of pure oxygen does not rust.

Densely Populated.
The population of the world could be contained in Delaware if it was as congested as the people in eleven New York city blocks at the rate of 1,200 per acre.

Austria's Iron Mountain.
The Erzberg, Austria's iron mountain, will furnish ore for 1,000 more years.

Cochin China.
The area of Cochin China is about 21,000 square miles—virtually a great level rice field—one-fifth of which is under cultivation. The draft animals are bullocks and carabaos.

The Australian Dingo.
The only beast of prey found in Australia is the dingo, or wild dog.

Love.
"A species of cerebral commotion and a stirring of some hitherto dormant association centers by an appropriate affinitive impression" is the diagnosis of love—to be exact, first love—as recently given by a famous English physician and man of science. Yet the disease does not always seem so serious as that.

The First Clocks.
Originally clocks had only the hour hand, but the minute hand was added later, as it became fashionable to make the dials as decorative as possible.

Gold.
Gold in its pure state is only a trifle harder than lead and very much softer than copper, silver, platinum, zinc or iron. As a consequence of this it is alloyed with copper or silver, and both these metals are often used. Without the alloy gold would be practically useless for the purposes to which it is generally applied.

Prunes.
There's woe in boarding houses, but joy among the boarders. And mistresses are giving cooks a bunch of funny orders. With all this rise of feeling the reason spirits drop is the failure, so reported, of the favorite prune crop.

No table in a boarding house was ever quite complete. Unless the juicy prune was there, with other things to eat. Hereafter they'll be luxuriating and not a standing job. So every budding humorist at them his wit may poke. —Brooklyn Times.

Its Finish.
"Isn't your new gown finished yet?" "Oh, gracious, no! The dressmaker's work on it was only completed last Saturday." "But if the dressmaker's through isn't that all?" "Of course not. All my friends have to criticize it yet." —Smart Set.

Some Satisfaction.
"Ma," begged Elsie, "tell me some profanity, won't you?" "Why, Elsie!" exclaimed her mother. "Little girls mustn't use profane words." "Oh, I just want to think them when I fall down and bump myself!" —Philadelphia Press.

Dickery, Dickery, Deek.
You know the mouse ran up the clock. But why? His nest to fix. Says Mother Goose in English bum. "The clock struck one, and down he came." "Boh! Here's the secret—keep it mum—His nest was full of ticks." —New York Times.

Similar, but Different.
"I reckon you ain't much like your ma," said the old fashioned woman as they met on the street corner. "Oh, yes, I am," protested the overdressed young lady. "Ma's at home piecing a quilt and I'm out making a spread." —Chicago News.

When Love is Young.
"You haven't half smoked that cigar. A newly married man should not be so wasteful."

"I leave the butts long to please my wife. She likes to loop 'em with ribbons and hang 'em about the fat." —Washington Herald.

Ennis & Tenbrook, of Merrill, have purchased the Mills launch and started for Merrill with it on Sunday. They got stuck in the mud and remained there for several hours, after which they returned to this city. The launch will be put on Lost river and will be used to make trips to the Lava Beds.

When she asks you if she is the first girl you ever kissed tell her no, lest she think you a mollycoddle. Merrill. Property is reasonable.
